PHOTOGRAPHY TOURS & WORKSHOPS

WELCOME

We hope you enjoy our latest dedicated Photography Tours Brochure, which is packed with ideas to inspire your wildlife photography holidays for 2024, 2025 and beyond.

We now offer over 80 dedicated small group Photography Tours and Workshops to suit all abilities. Our range of holidays has been designed to offer the perfect combination of outstanding wildlife viewing and exceptional photography opportunities. All of our holidays are led by expert photographers, most of whom are award-winning and/or work as professional photographers, and have a wealth of technical skills and field experience. Most importantly, they're all very personable, with excellent communication skills and they'll work with you to ensure that you get the most from your trip.

In this brochure, we feature inspirational articles and showcase our collection of tours including a new safari to Kenya's Rift Valley with Sean Weekly, an adventure to the Falklands with Kevin Morgans, a Svalbard Expedition with Bret Charman and we launch our Festival of Wildlife 2026 to Madagascar.

We've also included a tour calendar on pages 22 and 23 to help you plan your next exciting photographic adventure.

We look forward to welcoming you on your next wildlife holiday.

WHAT TO EXPECT ON OUR WILDLIFE PHOTOGRAPHY TOURS

On all our Photography Tours, you have plenty of opportunity to develop your technical skills through a series of informal workshops 'in the field'. Suitable for all levels, from basic to advanced, the workshops cover a variety of photographic techniques and skills relevant to the subject matter and/or particular habitat. Expert photographic leaders will offer as much one-to-one time and tuition as is feasible, and the pace of the trips is such that there's ample time to get the most from the photographic potential of each location visited.

OUR PHOTOGRAPHY TOUR LEADERS

Our collection of wildlife photography tours continues to grow and so we're working with an increasing number of expert wildlife photographers based in the UK. Here, we're delighted to introduce you to each leader and throughout this brochure, their names feature on the tours they lead. Choose to join one of our small group trips or arrange a private tailor-made itinerary.

Neil Aldridge

Having grown up in South Africa, Neil learnt his craft photographing Africa's iconic species and trained as a professional guide. Now, based near Bristol, he focuses on wildlife closer to home, leading photography trips in the UK and Europe as well as a range of tours in Botswana and South Africa.

Mark Carwardine

Mark is an award-winning writer, zoologist, TV and radio broadcaster, and a widely published wildlife photographer. He has built up an extensive collection of wildlife and landscape images taken in over 100 countries on all seven continents and served as head judge in Wildlife Photographer of the Year.

Bret Charman

Bret is a multi-award-winning wildlife photographer and a full-time member of the team at Wildlife Worldwide. He leads a number of tours for us around the world and has a particular love for African wildlife. In 2017 he won the 'Birds in Flight' category in Bird Photographer of the Year.

Ben Cherry

Ben is an environmental photojournalist and natural history cameraman, with a focus on highlighting the beauty of the natural world and also how we interact with it. He has had success in international competitions, been published in numerous magazines and has helped film footage for the BBC.

Nick Garbutt

Nick has worked closely with us for many years to develop a unique portfolio of wildlife photography tours which are second to none! A two-time category winner in the Wildlife Photographer of the Year competition, Nick's tours form the backbone of our exciting programme.

Emma Healey

Having spent many years travelling to far-flung destinations with her camera, Emma brings her love of wildlife photography, nature and travel to the Wildlife Worldwide team. Emma has travelled extensively, with Canada, Borneo and Kenya being among her favourites and has developed a real love of primates.

Alex Hyde

An award-winning nature photographer and university lecturer, Alex's photography has received high acclaim, especially his spectacular and innovative macro images which include the winning entry in the 'Hidden Britain' category of the British Wildlife Photography Awards.

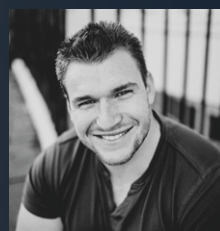

Kevin Morgans

A talented wildlife photographer, Kevin has been awarded in numerous competitions and is best known for his incredible work with the Atlantic puffins of the UK. He has been running workshops for many years, passing on his knowledge of the natural world and photography expertise.

Ben Sutcliffe

Ben has travelled to many countries from a young age across North and Central America, as well as more widely in Europe. Ben's fascination for travelling helped fuel his passion for wildlife photography and coupled with his infectious enthusiasm, he's an excellent leader and can be found leading many of our tours.

Sean Weekly

Multi-award-winner and full-time photographer, Sean's work is regularly featured across a range of national and international publications. Sean has led numerous workshops in the UK and further afield in Europe at locations including Skomer, Greece, Finland, Spain and Poland.

Tour Leader Kevin Morgans describes our new photography workshop dedicated to celebrating the photogenic red squirrel. From our charming base in the Yorkshire Dales, this short break provides the perfect opportunity to photograph red squirrels in all their glory!

One of our most iconic mammals, with its twitching ear tufts, bushy tail and beautiful colouration, it's no wonder the red squirrel is among the most cherished of British species to watch and photograph. Once widespread across the country, for most, just catching a glimpse of a red squirrel is now a rare event that's only possible in a small number of locations outside of the Scottish Highlands.

Although there are several locations where red squirrels can be seen, photographing them remains challenging. The use of specialist hides, designed with photography in mind, creates unrivalled photographic potential and offers the best chance of capturing this charismatic species on camera.

For our new specialist red squirrel photography workshop, we've teamed up with a local Yorkshire-based photographer and Kevin Morgans to offer the most outstanding red squirrel photography experience imaginable. Our base is a charming country hotel on the northern edge of the Yorkshire Dales National Park. Known for its distinctive and atmospheric landscapes, the park's woodlands are a refuge for many nationally rare species, including an important population of red squirrel.

Over the course of our workshop, we have exclusive access to various hides, including a reflection pool hide, and woodland hides which feature a unique jumping platform - an unsurpassed photographic highlight! Here squirrels can be photographed frozen in time, in the midst of athletic mid-air leaps.

The reflection pool hide offers a fantastic opportunity to see and photograph the squirrels while they're feeding, drinking and even playing in the water. In still conditions, you can obtain perfect reflection images against a clean woodland floor backdrop.

The woodland hide has been purposely designed to enable comfortable photography, with windows offering views of perches on three sides. At the front of the hide, there are dual-height windows which allow for shots of squirrels on the trees, on the taller or lower perches or ground-level shots.

We've timed our workshop to provide soft morning light and the warm colours of early autumn. This rich palate serves as a stunning backdrop when a squirrel pauses to eat a nut, or takes that first sip from the mirror-perfect reflection pool.

For the ultimate pictures, we can switch our focus to capturing the agility of the squirrels at the dedicated jumping platform. Red squirrels are capable of leaping distances of more than two metres - an impressive feat for an animal that's only 25 centimetres high, and a thrill to observe. Photographing this behaviour is even more special and rewarding. It takes patience and practice to capture this exciting moment, but with luck, the image will stay with you forever.

Red squirrels are wonderful animals to spend time with. At this quiet woodland site, there are usually several around at any given time, giving us near-constant activity.

Throughout our workshop, I'll be on hand to offer advice and help you to ensure that you get the most from your time in the field. We'll also have an opportunity to review images and work on processing when we're back at the hotel. No matter how much experience you have in photography, you're sure to come away feeling inspired by new photographic techniques and with a stunning collection of images to treasure.

NEW Red Squirrel Photography Workshop in Yorkshire

HUNGARY

Fabulous Wildlife Photography

Wildlife Photographer and Zoologist, Mark Carwardine, invites you to join him in Hungary for sublime bird photography using specialist hides. Here he gives an insight into the highlights of his tour 'Wildlife Photography in Hungary'.

If, like me, you love wildlife photography, this trip is an unmissable treat, and one of my absolute favourites! The week involves unlimited and exclusive use of up to 24 of the best wildlife photography hides in the world (the precise number depends on the season). Designed and built by my great friend, multi-award-winning Wildlife Photographer Bence Máté, they offer dazzling perspectives (including treetop and water-level shooting) in some truly wonderful settings. Bence pioneered the use of one-way windows in photography hides, which enhances the experience beyond belief.

One thing I can't stress enough is that anyone with an interest in wildlife photography will benefit - beginners and experienced photographers alike. Don't worry if you feel you don't have enough photographic knowledge or the most impressive kit, I promise you'll get some wonderful images and experiences out of the trip. I'll be on hand to help, of course, and will spend time with you in the hides as you practice and perfect your skills. And, if you're experienced, the week will open a whole new world of stunning photographic opportunities.

So what's a typical week like? After a short-haul flight to Budapest, we travel to Bence's clean and comfortable farm a couple of hours south, and this is our base for the week. There's wildlife absolutely everywhere. It's like going back in time to the wildlife-rich Britain of 100 years ago - with the added bonus of a plethora of strikingly healthy bird populations from Eastern Europe too. We have lunches and dinners together, usually sitting outside, with ground squirrels at our feet, swallows filling the air above, and everything from lesser spotted woodpeckers to turtle doves in the trees around us. We rave about the most recent half-day shoot to the ever-present soundtrack of cuckoos and golden orioles, and plan who would like to go where for the next half-day shoot. There's a lot of flexibility - if you fancy starting at 4am, that's fine; if you'd prefer a lie-in and to start later, that's fine too. It's entirely up to you. Depending on the season, we can even shoot overnight, with natural and artificial lighting.

We don't have to travel far to find our subjects each day - there's a smorgasbord of charismatic species, unaware that we're watching them a few metres away behind the glass, just a short walk or a short drive away. Depending on the season, we'll be photographing everything from white-tailed eagles, bitterns, little owls and hawfinches to spoonbills, black woodpeckers, European bee-eaters and hoopoes, with otters, hares and roe deer, thrown in for good measure. We've even had pine martens at some of the drinking stations too.

I've never experienced such amazing hides anywhere in the world. They offer unparalleled photography opportunities (in comfort, too). For example, if you fancy shooting herons, egrets, storks and spoonbills from a few metres away you might choose the Theatre Hide (which is mostly underwater - you stay perfectly dry, but shoot at water level with fantastic perspectives of the birds). If you'd prefer to shoot blackcaps, green woodpeckers or sparrowhawks up-close you might choose one of the drinking stations. Or you might fancy a morning photographing hoopoes or bee-eaters from one of the specialist hides. How about swallows collecting mud for their nests right in front of another sunken hide? Or kingfishers diving into the water for fish? You might even prefer a change from birds - otters, for example, or ground squirrels. I'll rotate between hides to spend as much time with everyone as possible.

By the end of the holiday, I guarantee you'll have a stunning collection of new wildlife photographs and you'll leave feeling inspired with lots of thoughts and creative ideas. On average, I take 20,000-30,000 photographs in a typical week at the farm. And, of course, we always have a lot of laughs along the way.

KENYA

The Great Rift Valley by Day & Night

Photographer Sean Weekly has always enjoyed diurnal and nocturnal photography and the varied photographic opportunities that different times of day create. Sean leads our new tour to Kenya where you can experience and photograph the wildlife of the region by day and night.

Following the huge success of our Zimanga - Wildlife & Night Sky Photography tour in South Africa, I'm delighted to be working with Wildlife Worldwide to develop our portfolio of photography tours, particularly those that combine diurnal and nocturnal photography. For 2025, we've created a new tour to Kenya which incorporates a similar approach.

Kenya is perhaps best known for its annual wildebeest migration, but the Great Rift Valley is a vast area of wilderness and filled with some other exceptional wildlife. The 25,000-hectare Olkiramatian Conservancy, situated to the north of Lake Natron, is home to a staggering diversity of wildlife and is perfect for those with a passion for wildlife photography.

Situated on the edge of the Nguruman Escarpment, we have exclusive use of the beautiful Lantorre Lodge for a 7-night stay. Offering game drives twice a day and exclusive use of a purpose-built photography hide, the lodge is the perfect place to base ourselves and become immersed in the host of photographic opportunities that can be found in the Great Rift Valley.

We have exclusive access to the Olkiramatian Conservancy as well as access to the neighbouring 62,700-hectare Shompole Conservancy for our game drives. There's also the opportunity to visit the nearby Lake Magadi, where we can photograph the flamingos feeding in the caustic waters. The trip has been designed to coincide with the end of the dry season, when water levels in the area are at their lowest and the wildlife is drawn to the lodge's waterhole, thereby maximising our photographic opportunities from the hide.

Our daily routine consists of morning and afternoon photographic game drives in the conservancies and we can spread out across two vehicles, providing plenty of space for everyone. Of course, with photography being our primary focus, we endeavour to make the most of the 'golden hours' every day. However, the length of each drive really depends on the sightings that we encounter. Having exclusive use of the lodge and its two vehicles affords us this level of flexibility.

In the evenings, we have the option of a night drive or a session in the onsite photography hide overlooking the waterhole. With strategically positioned backlighting, it offers the opportunity to get some stunning images. Whilst species can never be guaranteed, previous visitors have included leopard, African wild cat, caracal, serval, striped hyena and porcupine.

The itinerary as a whole should provide many chances to photograph a wide range of mammalian and avian subjects, in different settings and light conditions, allowing you to experiment with various shots and fully utilise the tuition and guidance available. Experiencing this mesmerising region of Kenya by night and day allows us to enjoy all the variegations of its wildlife and photographic opportunities, whilst staying in an exclusive, luxury lodge in the heart of the African wilderness. What's not to like?

MADAGASCAR

Festival of Wildlife 2026

If you're looking for a wildlife spectacle to a destination like no other, with a team of experts, celebrating some of the planet's most treasured species, then join us on our Festival of Wildlife 2026. Nick Garbutt is one of the world's leading authorities on the wildlife of Madagascar and here introduces this exceptional tour.

I imagine travelling for 12 hours to another planet. Science fiction? Well yes, but getting on a plane to Madagascar might just be comparable. Glance at a map of Africa and it would be easy to dismiss the large odd-shaped island off the south-east coast as nothing more than an insignificant chip off the old continental block. Now think again. Virtually nothing in Madagascar bears resemblance to anything in Africa or anywhere else for that matter. It really is another world. Millions of years of isolation have led to an array of species that have followed unconventional evolutionary pathways unlike anything elsewhere and consequently the vast majority of plants and animals are found nowhere else.

The island's most famous inhabitants are its lemurs - charming off-shoots of the primate family tree, whose ancestors arrived on the island over 50 million years ago. They've subsequently diversified spectacularly - today over 100 lemur species are known. Amongst the most endearing are the cuddly teddy bear-like indri and gorgeous diademed sifaka that live in the lush eastern rainforests. Here too are minuscule mouse lemurs and dwarf lemurs, amongst a different cast of characters only visible on the forest stage after dark.

There are numerous birds which are unique to the island (over 65% are endemic), including vangas with vastly varied beak shapes, noisy couas and colourful, skulking ground rollers. Reptiles too abound - over 60% of the world's chameleons are found nowhere else, including the world's largest - Parson's chameleon - and smallest, the tiny stump-tailed or leaf chameleons. More remarkable still are the amazing leaf-tailed geckos that achieve near-perfect camouflage, resembling tree bark or dead and shrivelled leaves. Add to this a myriad of colourful and very vocal tree frogs and a multitude of peculiar insects like the amazing giraffe-necked weevil and there's an omnipresent throng of accessible wildlife on hand to grab your attention.

Madagascar offers so much variety that it's impossible to pick a single location that encapsulates it all. Nor is it a straightforward country to travel around and explore. Hence, for this Festival, we've chosen two of the island's more accessible and most rewarding locations that in combination offer very different and complementary wildlife highlights and experiences.

The first is Andasibe-Mantadia National Park, arguably Madagascar's premier eastern rainforest reserve. Our base is Mantadia Lodge, which allows easy access to several different forest sites, where we should encounter indris, diademed sifakas, several other varieties of lemur, numerous chameleons, and a bewildering array of other species, all at close quarters. We then move onto the beautiful beachfront Anjajavy Lodge in the north-west, where a private deciduous forest reserve is home to stunning Coquerel's sifakas, brown lemurs and even the bizarre and bewitching aye-aye, surely one of the strangest mammals on Earth.

Much of Madagascar's extraordinary wildlife is under severe threat, as large areas of the island's unique forests are being removed to grow crops. Sensitive wildlife tourism and working with the local community are integral strategies for the conservation of Madagascar's remaining natural resources. The positive empowerment this brings to local communities is paramount.

During this Festival, many of our outings are to community-managed reserves which help to support numerous crucial conservation projects.

If you're looking for a wildlife spectacle in a destination like no other, then join our team of enthusiastic experts in 2026 and celebrate some of the planet's most peculiar and treasured species. Magical Madagascar awaits you.
